Bond University

2017 | Bringing Ambition to Life

Indigenous Scholarships

Hannah Duncan
Bachelor of Law
2014 Indigenous Pathways Scholar

"I originally thought that when I graduated, I would just blend in with society. Being at Bond and participating in all the extracurricular activities has encouraged me to believe that I am not just an ordinary 'Joe Blow' but a potential leader of tomorrow. I now feel that after my degree, I'll be able to contribute to society, not just through my career, but by helping the Indigenous community in some way."

Indigenous Scholarships

Bond University is dedicated to supporting outstanding Indigenous students from around Australia with a variety of full-fee and part-fee scholarships to help them achieve their ambitions.

Bond University's Indigenous Scholarships are designed to reward students' achievements in academics, leadership activities and community involvement.

YOUR NETWORK OF SUPPORT

In 2012 Bond University opened the Nyombil Indigenous Support Centre to provide academic and cultural support for Bond's Indigenous community. The centre offers the services of an Indigenous Cultural Support Officer to assist Bond's Indigenous students with the unique challenges, in particular related to cultural differences, they may face in moving from remote communities and undertaking the new challenge of university study.

Academically, the centre assists the transition into the higher education environment, understanding university policy and supporting progression. Culturally, the centre promotes engagement by helping students and Bond University to connect with the local Indigenous community.

By creating an environment where Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students are able to connect and grow both academically and personally, our vision is to see your ambition come to life.

For more information about the Nyombil Centre or Indigenous support on campus please call 07 5595 5617.
